Raise The Red Lantern Three

Raise The Red Lantern has three stories, each twice as depressing and twisted as the last. Sad stories of lust, greed, treachery, sex, drugs, death and so much more. Yet what we really have is the last scene, the final act, the beginning of the end. All the major events, the important decisions, have already happened.

Su Tong's three novellas speak on the surface of gender and sexual repression, but underneath that layer it is brilliant and brutal humanization of a culture that has repressed itself for centuries. While "Raise the Red Lantern" carries the title of this collection, "Opium Family" is my favorite novella of the three.

The Chinese film "Raise the Red Lantern" (1991), like the Japanese film "Woman in the Dunes" (1960), is about sexual enslavement. In both films, the protagonist enters a closed system from which there is no escape, and life is ruled by long-established "customs." In the Japanese film, a woman captures a man, who spends the night in her home at the bottom of a hole in the desert and finds in ...

Red Lanterns: Atrocities | DC Database | Fandom

The film Raise the Red Lantern talks about how women were treated unequally and how the social atmosphere influenced woman's thoughts and behaviors. The most impressive thing in this film for me is Chinese marriage custom at that time. In ancient China, polygyny was a production of Patriarchy culture, which means a man could marry many women.
